And the Beat Goes On

Trump the Magnificent

So, what could possibly go wrong? On June 12, 2018, Donald Trump will meet with Kim Jong Un for 45 minutes. The only other persons present will be their interpreters. Scary huh! Trump says he's been preparing for this meeting all of his life and says, "very quickly, I'll know if something good is going to happen". Who trusts Trump's instincts? I sure don't. Just look at the disaster that is his administration. He's shown an uncanny ability to consistently hire unqualified individuals to fill his cabinet positions. He doesn't vet anyone and makes these hires based on instinct. Look at the unprecedented mess he made of the G7 Summit this past weekend. So back to my initial question. What could possibly go wrong. If history is prolog, everything, everything, everything.
