

Local Politics Matter

Black Lives Matter and Occupy Wall Street

They Should Unite

I think Black Lives Matter and Occupy Wall Street should unite. Many are calling for the ground swell of people to take the country from special interest groups, corporations and the like. I think this would be a great marriage. Black Lives Matter has the grit as well as the willingness to fight anybody anywhere and at any time. Occupy had the formula to take on Wall Street. Putting the two organizations together would be huge. What was lacking in Occupy was a leader, what's lacking in Black Lives is more white people. Both movements have the same agenda...equal the playing field. Wall Street has ruined it for the majority of Americans. White people are feeling the pinch and smelling the stench that Blacks have dealt with all of their lives. When college students started coming out of school with a degree and a mortgage but no house something went economically wrong. Why is it that we can't spend our tax dollars on us? Why do we have to pay the corporations' bills with our money? They cut jobs, send them overseas, don't pay taxes and expect us to be happy. Well I ain't happy. They are always talking about leaving the country in better shape for our grandchildren...whose grandchildren? Theirs? They already have it all, so why can't they leave us a sliver of the pie. Occupy had it right...it's just so unfortunate that the media was not on their side. Social media has to play a larger role for Black Lives and Occupy because the normal vein of media will not support upsetting the status quo. If Black Lives Matter joins Occupy Wall Street this would be Major....Let's do it y'all.

Share Your Comments

Return to LPM

