

Local Politics Matter

I'm Still Stuck

I Can't Understand Their Motives

I knew there was discontent in America, but never did I imagine that it was at the level of pure hate. I remember when President Obama was elected. The opposition marched on Washington carrying those signs, the ones that depicted the President as a witch doctor, a Nazi, and so on. I remember the Don't Tread on Me flags. I remember the real Americans, "the Tea Party was born." Well I thought that was pure hatred. But little did I know it could get worse. The first day in office Senator McConnell and his crew met at a restaurant to collaborate on how they could make President Obama a one term President. That's when it all began, the party of No. Now roll the tape forward. As much as the Republican Party campaigned against President elect Trump, they are all in line for him now. Senator Mitch McConnell's first statement after the elections was "We will respect the will of the people". Yes the will of the people. I believe the will of the people only refers to Republicans when they win. I can't believe that that Donald Trump is our President Elect. You know what, that is shameful. How can anyone with cancer, hypertension, diabetes, leukemia, or other life threatening illness feel good right now. How could any of these people vote for the man who campaigned to repeal Obama care (The Affordable Care Act)? I just find it hard to imagine that you could hate someone so much that you would vote against your own interests. College tuition that is free for anyone earning less than one hundred twenty five thousand dollars, well that's the majority of us. Who votes against that? What about the magic words that you don't hear anymore? Who is going to pay for it? What about women's health. I just came to the realization that there is more hate than I could have ever imagined. They say Obama was the divider, well I beg to differ. I watch and read about the opposition Party and they hardly ever have anything good to say about the current President. They are still using 8 year old talking points, the ones where they all say the same thing over and over until we believe or they believe it themselves. We are in big trouble with this new President. He has no boundaries. He reminds me of the affluent kid who killed those people while driving drunk. He has no one to challenge him. He has a blank check to do whatever he chooses to the country. Whatever Trump wants, Trump gets because he has never been challenged. Now the Republican Party is rallying around and coming to protect him. Double standards, do as I say not do as I do. They are bending the rules for their advantage. And the media is playing along with this foolishness. Minorities will be excluded from the agenda of this administration. And we have to challenge this. We have to be the opposition party. Make some noise. The Republicans think that they own this country and we (the others) have to settle for the crumbs. Are you scared now? I'm talking to those who voted for him. What were you thinking? Look at the double standards that this administration is already putting forward. Just like the words in a Michael Jackson song says "They don't really care about us." The Republican Party has finally gotten what they wanted "White Men the Rulers of All." Now all of you others take a seat and wait. I hope we don't get flushed down the toilet with them. Get up and do something people.
